Antibiotic Resistance: pGLO™ Bacterial Transformation Lab

Objectives:
Students will describe antibiotic resistance as an example of evolution by natural selection.
Students will conduct an experiment to evaluate the spread of antibiotic resistance in cultured bacteria.

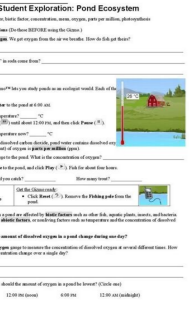

BACKGROUND INFO:

In this lab, you will perform a procedure known as bacterial transformation to introduce an ampicillin-resistance (amp^r) plasmid into the bacteria Escherichia coli. This amp^r plasmid (named "pGLO") contains the gene for beta-lactamase, an enzyme which provides resistance to the antibiotic ampicillin, a member of the penicillin family. The beta-lactamase protein is produced and secreted by bacteria that contain the plasmid.

Instructor's NOTES:
REMEMBER THE FOLLOWING SAFETY ISSUES ASSOCIATED WITH THIS LAB:
PENICILLIN ALLERGY! (Ask ahead of time!!)
Need to set up a BLEACH BUCKET for disposing of all bacterially contaminated items!!!
Goggles?

1. As the introduction to the lab, provide background information and instruct students to conduct research to identify and define the bolded terms. See student instructions handout on the next page.
2. Once student lab groups have demonstrated their understanding of these terms and can explain them, move on to Day 1 activity – generation of E. coli starter plates. As from instructions on pages 16-17 on pGLO Kit instructions. Appropriate questions to check understanding before student's begin: What is a plasmid? How are we going to get it inside the bacteria? What will happen if the plasmid is successfully introduced inside the bacteria? What is beta lactamase? How does it inactivate ampicillin?
3. HW – DUE before performing transformation procedure; ANNOTATED Transformation Kit Quick Guide handout – INSTRUCTIONS FOR HOW TO PERFORM THE TRANSFORMATION PROCEDURE.
